Master plan for Southport is passed by West Sac council

By Steve Marschke and David Weller

Following several hours of discussion last Wednesday, the West Sacramento City Council unanimously approved the Southport Framework Plan. The plan provides a master plan for development of the city's 7,000-acre southern half.

Begun in 1991 and costing over a half-million dollars, the plan adds detail to the city's general plan in Southport. The general plan, covering the entire city, was adopted in 1990.

The council added to the framework plan a provision for local homeowners associations with enforcement authority in new Southport neighborhoods.

"I'm very pleased," said Mayor Cindy Tuttle. "It's been a good process. We now have a good idea what the overall area will look like."

The Southport Framework Plan was developed by the planning firm PBR, which won the contract after a planning "competition" in which four for award-winning design firms tried to woo the city council and public with design concepts in 1991.

Highlights of the plan:

■ 14,050 residential units at buildout, housing 43,000 people. The current population of the entire city is just over 30,000.

■ A possible light rail spur down the Yolo Short Line Railroad east of Jefferson Blvd.

■ Provisions for habitat for the endangered Swainson's Hawk largely through development fees in Southport to finance the set-aside of land outside West Sacramento. Developers may pay $1995 per acre for habitat mitigation.

■ Local business services such as corner markets and day care within the "core" of each of six planned villages, with major city services remaining north of the barge canal and outside Southport. A "town center" is planned for near Jefferson Blvd. south of the bridge.

■ Grid street patterns in new villages will be encouraged, with a plan for bike and pedestrian traffic.

■ Other architectural characteristics, such as diversity in appearance, the inclusion of front porches in new homes, and "harmony" among pieces of a development shall be "encouraged" but not required.

■ New bridges are planned for Jefferson Blvd., South River Road and Stone Blvd. The plan does not depend on additional bridges at Sutterville Rd. on the Sacramento River or Enterprise Blvd. over the deep water channel.

Thomson announcement?

Helen M. Thomson, who represents the Second District on the Yolo County Board of Supervisors, has called a press conference this morning in Davis. The conference is believed to concern a possible announcement of candidacy for the 8th District State Assembly seat soon to be vacated by Tom Hannigan.

Thomson, along with First District Supervisor Mike McGowan of West Sacramento, has been considering entering the race for the Democratic nomination.

Local Democrats have said that either McGowan or Thomson would enter the race, but not both.

Southport plan leaves some unhappy

Landowner Lou Arges fears he will lose some rights

By David Weller

Southport landowner Lou Arges threatened Wednesday night to take the city to court if it does not make concessions in the rezoning of some of his Southport property.

Showing the council members a 1972 subdivision map, Arges said that both he and Vince Frugoli have for a long time planned to divide the properties into half acre lots and build houses for their children. Frugoli owns land adjacent to Arges" on Davis Road west of the railroad tracks.

When Arges bought his property in 1972, the county had the entire area zoned for half acre parcels. The newly passed Southport framework plan rezones the properties on and around Davis Road for two and a half acre lots.

> "It makes me sad that you spend your whole lives out there and someone comes along and marks you off with a pencil."
> -- Lou Arges

The subdivision Arges built in the early 1970s consists of five houses ranging in size from less than half an acre to three quarters of an acre.

While the lots with houses already built on them will not be affected by the rezoning, Arges is concerned about a four and a half acre lot he still owns behind the small subdivision.

According to Arges, his agreement with the county allowed that he would be allowed to subdivide the four and a half acres when services became available to area. "When water and sewer became available we were to be able to build more houses," he said.

Arges believes that by rezoning his vacant lot, the city has effectively lowered the value of the property. The lot that could have potentially held up to nine houses on half acre parcels, will now be zoned for only one. "How can you divide four and a half acres into two, 2 and a half acre lots?" he asked.

"I don't know who in the hell is going to build a big house on a two and a half acre parcel when it is surrounded by half acre parcels," he said.

"It makes me sad that you spend your whole lives out here and someone comes along and marks you off with a pencil," he added.

Mayor Cindy Tuttle in a phone interview that in considering the framework plan, "it is important to stay focused on the big picture. What's best for the overall good of the area and the people in the area. If we start spot zoning, it defeats the purpose of the framework plan."

"We can't be driven by fear of lawsuits," she continued.

Tuttle said that Arges' map is valid, but that the framework plan does not change the map.

"The map he showed me shows lots along Davis Road as they currently exist, and a 4 and a half acre parcel behind," she said.

Bike lane brouhaha:

No bicycle lanes on West Capitol for now

By David Weller

The city council voted unanimously to kill the West Capitol Avenue bicycle lane plan presented by staff Wednesday night.

The plan was opposed by the West Sacramento Downtown Association, Chamber of Commerce and the Hotel and Motel Owners Association.

"The council is still committed to bike lanes on West Capitol Avenue. It is still part of the general plan, but this proposal didn't fit our needs," said Mayor Cindy Tuttle.

The business community was concerned about the proposal because it would eliminate almost all parking on West Capitol.

The fear that lost parking in the central core of the city would cause a loss of revenue to prompted the three business associations to oppose the plan.

"They came up with alternatives that hadn't been considered, like running the bike lanes along Merkeley Avenue part of the way," Tuttle said.

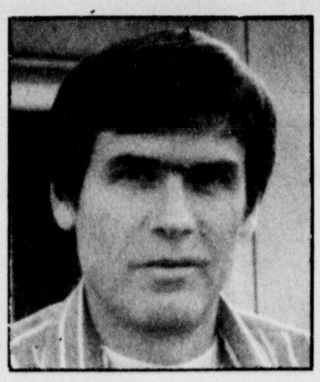
The council is willing to look at new plans, and to revisit the issue as new opportunities arise, according to Tuttle.

For now, the city is letting an opportunity to use money from a state grant pass by. The state would pay 90 percent, up to $56,250 for the bike lanes, if a construction contract were awarded by June 31.

"Possibly losing a grant isn't a good enough reason to go through with a plan that will hurt business. What good would it do us to gain $60,000 that might cause us to lose that much in business and sales tax revenues," Tuttle said.

Oh, what a wonderful time it was to be alive

My Back Pages



By Daryl Fisher

About a week and a half ago, I was comfortably seated on my couch watching the CBS Evening News with Dan Rather and Connie Chung when my fourteen-year-old son suddenly strolled up and sat down beside me. "So, what's on the news tonight?" he asked with indifference.

"They're doing a bunch of reports on all the V-E Day celebrations that are going on throughout the world," I mumbled.

"Someone's celebrating V-D Day?" he asked, smiling and shaking his head.

"Not V-D Day, you dingbat," I said. "V-E Day."

"Oh. Sorry. What's that?"

"It stands for Victory in Europe," I explained.

"The end of some stupid war, huh?"

"World War II," I said.

"Boring," he said as he jumped up and headed back towards his room.

"But this is history!" I shouted out after him.

"Then that makes it hecka-boring!" he yelled back before disappearing into his room.

As I returned my attention to the television screen, there was President Clinton, making an emotional speech and saying, "Today we, the sons and daughters of their sacrifice, say: Thank you -- and well done." Then the scene turned to the Arc de Triomphe in Paris, where fifty years ago the victors of World War II had danced for joy knowing that Adolph Hitler's Nazi regime had finally surrendered in ruin. A reporter who was trying to put all the events of the day into context then shut up long enough to allow his viewers to watch as the gathered War veterans and other dignitaries looked up at the sky as a noisy jet flyover sent a stream of red, white, and blue smoke -- the French national colors -- down the famed Avenue Des Champs Elysee.

"Wouldn't it have been really great to have been alive on V-E Day?" I asked my wife, who had replaced my son on the couch.

"Oh, I can think of better times," she answered matter-of-factly.

"You're kidding," I said with surprise. "America has never been more powerful -- both militarily and economically. Plus we had just proved that democracies could triumph over fascists and totalitarians -- we even believed in our politicians."

"But 30 or 40 million people had just died," she said, "and think of all the terrible destruction the war had left behind."

"Okay," I said, "then name me one single time in American history when it would have been better to be alive."

"Well, let's see -- how about back in the 1860's?"

"During the Civil War?" I asked.

"Yeah."

"Why?" I asked, thinking that she was probably going to make a case for the fact that the Civil War was one of the defining moments in American history -- when we went from an agricultural to an industrial nation -- and turned our back on slavery.

"What?"

"I would have loved to have worn some of those poofy skirts and big bonnets."

"What in the world are you talking about?" I demanded.

"You've seen `Gone With The Wind', haven't you?"

"Of course I've seen `Gone With The Wind'."

"Well," she said with conviction, "that's when I would have liked to have been alive."

"Hey," interrupted my twenty-year-old daughter, who had wandered into the room, "what are you guys talking about?"

"Your dad wanted to know what period in history I would have liked to have been alive," answered my wife.

"Well, put me down for the Roaring 20's," said my daughter without hesitation.

"But why?" I asked, sensing that I was quickly losing control of the conversation.

"Because everyone had lots of money and it was one big party," said my daughter. "And I really love jazz music -- and I would have made a great flapper. I really like the short skirts they wore back then, too."

In frustration I said, "The next thing you two will be telling me is that you wouldn't even have minded living back in the middle ages if you could have just worn some of the fancy dresses the well-off women at court got to strut around in."

"Nope," said my daughter, shaking her head. "You can definitely count me out when it comes to being alive during the middle ages."

"How come?" I asked.

"No toilets."

The "KO at Arco" last Saturday had a paid gate of $300,000 and 8,103 boxing fans as well as the millions of HBO viewers were treated to a great evening of boxing.

Lennox Lewis (26-1, 22 KOs) floored Lionel Butler in the fifth round of their heavyweight title-elimination bout. Lewis should be in line for a rematch against Oliver McCall, the man who took his title away last year, but Lewis may have a problem because promoter Don King is trying to use his influence in the WBC to have Mike Tyson ranked No. 1 despite three years of inactivity.

Michael Moorer, who wants to regain his title, won his bout with a ten-round decision over Melvin Foster. Moorer wants a rematch with George Foreman, who KOd him in the 10th round last year.

The best bout of the night was West Sac's Willie Jorrin winning his 10 round debut with a stunning barrage of punches to the body of Max Maldonado. The referee stopped the contest in the eight round after Jorrin floored Maldonado with a right end to the chin. It was the first time the Mexican fighter has hit the canvas in 26 professional bouts.

Willie improved his record to 11-0 with 8 KOs.

Promoter Don Chargin will be featuring Willie in another 10 rounder on his next card in July, and would like to land Jorrin a TV fight on CBS in September.

A sad note in boxing: Jimmy Garcia, the Colombian fighter who was injured and required brain surgery more than a week ago in Las Vegas after fighting Gabriel Ruelas, has taken a turn for the worse and has begun to suffer kidney failure.

The NBA will be heading into the Conference finals early next week and as of today, it looks like Phoenix will match up with San Antonio. The Pacers have the Knicks on the ropes, leading their series 3-1, and should finish off New York on Friday in Indiana.

The Bulls and Magic will go down to the wire, but the Bulls are a much better road team and should win in seven games.

The Giants' pitching woes continue after they got hammered in Colorado.

Starting pitchers are hard to come by and the Giants are looking for help with a trade! Matt Williams leads the NL in home runs, with eight, and RBI, with 23.

The A's are playing .500 ball, but could use some pitching, too. Geronimo Berroa was named the AL player of the week. He was 13 for 28 (.464) with one double, three home runs, six RBI. Berroa has seven HRs this season and McGwire has six HRs with a league leading 20 RBI.

See ya next week!!

River City's weightlifters to chase title

From River City High School

River City High School will compete in the Northern California High School Weightlifting Championships at 10 a.m. this Saturday at Center High School in Elverta.

The Raiders will be represented by four teams, and will try for an unprecedented third consecutive team title, having won both the men's and women's championships in 1994.

Competing for River City will be Angel Cardenas, Jonathan Favis, Jose Martinez, Juan Acevedo, Shawn Wickliffe, Sam Savala, Paul Barber, Joe Flores, Joe Arch, Jose Flores, Daleen Holton, Sofia Savala, Alyssa Murphy, Betsy Perkins and Sheri Manasero.

"We're entering the competition with a lot of last minute changes," he said. "Some of our better lifters will be unavailable due to a conflict with the baseball and softball playoffs. But I expect us to be in the thick of things."

OPINION

News-Ledger Editorial

Support the police, but let's not go overboard

Punishing police officers who step over the rules and violate someone's basic rights is not being disloyal to police or anti-law enforcement. Just the opposite -- it tends to lead to better law enforcement, as well as higher public confidence that justice is being served and to more pride among officers themselves.

This is not to say that the two West Sacramento police officers who now face criminal charges are guilty without a trial, and that they must be punished. Far from it. Many of the key facts about the case are not yet publicly known, since both sides are reluctant to discuss the case before trial.

It is just to say that, on the whole, it is a good idea to hold police officers responsible to high standards and to punish those who deliberately betray those standards.

Police have a lot of power. They are often on-the-spot law, and it is often difficult for the public to hold them responsible afterwards. People with a badge and a gun simply must be trustworthy. Otherwise, the public is in danger, relations between the police and their community suffer, and everybody loses.

Look at New Orleans as an extreme example. With one of the most corrupt forces in the county, a police officer now stands accused of shooting a colleague and two other people to death while robbing a restaurant, and the incident doesn't really seem to surprise the locals. How much respect can the community have for its men and women in blue? How high can department morale be in New Orleans?

But let's go back to West Sacramento: this stuff about the blue ribbons being displayed in support of the two accused West Sac officers straddles a thin line.

Those who wear and display the ribbons to show their support for law enforcement in general, or in support of the "innocent until proven guilty" creed with respect to the two cops, certainly have a legitimate viewpoint.

But do the others? Those who display the blue ribbons while announcing, with no knowledge of the facts of the police brutality case, that the police chief and district attorney were wrong to take disciplinary action against the two officers? That whatever the two policemen may have done was all right, simply because the alleged victim was "only a scumbag?"

Take a look down the road. Will that kind of philosophy bring us the kind of police force we need and deserve?

Letters to the Editor

Cahill speaks

I want to thank all of the people who have made statements in support of me over the past few months. I especially want to thank Hope Herr for her encouraging letters to this paper. It is good to know that our citizens notice the effort that people go to in order to contribute positively to the community.

With all of the encouragement and support I have received, I feel it is still necessary to clarify some elements of the "story" surrounding my removal from the Planning Commission. Councilman Beers, for reasons only he really knows, chose to remove me. That was an action within his power, as my position on the commission was an appointment at his pleasure and sole discretion. If today there is anyone in the community now willing to apply for the position I vacated, they would also be subject to serving at his pleasure as well. When I originally applied for an appointment to the commission, Mr. Beers (whom I had met perhaps once or twice) told me he was specifically looking for someone who would be "independent" and able to act upon matters based upon personal good judgement and conscience. Those were the marching orders I received and acted upon.

With respect to the conduct of the other members of the commission upon hearing my statement of resignation, I would like to gently correct Ms. Herr's impression. Most of the commission members were learning of these events for the first time and their reactions were spontaneous and genuine. I was not offended by their conduct, in fact, I felt more than anything else a personal regret for having placed them in an awkward situation. In particular, I have been impressed with the quiet grace and sincerity which chairman Morazzinni immediately brought to his position. Knowing that he is presiding over the difficult issues still facing us makes me confident that our solutions will be honest and sensitive. You see, people only serve on the commissions and board that the council appoints because we honestly want to help our city. We all may have different styles, different opinions and different backgrounds, but the truly beautiful thing (that makes even a fall from grace such as mine bearable) is that in West Sacramento, unlike many other places I have lived, we find a way ultimately to come together where it really matters. Agreeing to disagree we are able to forge solutions that incorporate all those different points of view into something whose value exceeds the sum of the parts. Which in part is why I became so truly incensed at the divisive and elitist approach taken by some to accomplish their personal and political agendas at the expense of anyone who stood in their way.

My deepest regret at this point is that I know that I have the appearance that I was not respectful enough of the opinions of this small group of citizens with whom I strongly disagreed. Even so strongly disagreeing (as I continue to do with both their opinions and their methods) I realize I could have demonstrated more outward respect for the presentation of their point of view. I suppose that people in a public position do have an obligation to try even harder to be patient and understanding, even when (and perhaps especially when) that patience and understanding is not reciprocated and when some adults act more like spoiled children than as responsible community leaders. My actions as a commissioner would ultimately have been the same, but I now, better than ever, understand that an important part of the job of acting as a participant in the process of local government is not just to reach the right conclusions and make the right decision, but to do so in a way that helps those who disagree to understand, accept and live with an action they are opposed to. Well, the point of life is often to learn lessons through experience, and I view this entire experience as one big character builder.

In coming to grips with the resignation that was forced upon me, I polled several leading citizens of West Sacramento as to what I might do and how to best react. The consensus opinion, which I try to keep in mind, was that the best thing would be to accept what I could not change and learn how to do better next time. A local public official told me how one of his marine officers had instilled in him the adage to "live to fight another day." Sage advice, as there is much in this city that remains to be accomplished and I have by no means given up on having an impact on important issues still facing us. With all the public and private support I have received, I know that many people share my vision of a strong, vital and safe city that will be the envy of our neighbors across the river. When I find myself in the hot seat the next time, I'll have already learned that the best way to achieve that vision is to try to avoid fueling the flames, while still being unafraid of taking the heat.

Ms. Herr mad some moving comments in her recent letter on the reaction my daughter had to my resignation. It's nice to know that some people do care about what our children think because it is for them that we have to strive so hard to set a good example. Jessica is, like many children, both resilient to setbacks and, so far, oblivious of the adult world. So, rest assured that she's gotten over it, like she would with a skinned knee. As for having my arm twisted behind my back, I will admit to Ms. Herr that my arm does still ache a little bit. From now on, I'll be a little more careful who I let shake my hand.

Council blew it

On May 10, the city council had an opportunity to enhance the quality of life for all of the citizens of West Sacramento by approving plans for the West Capitol Avenue Bike Lane project, yet in the middle of the night, they turned it down in a short-sighted attempt to placate motel owners who want unsightly big rigs to continue to park along the strip. All but three businesses already provide off-street parking so there are alternatives. Instead of bike lanes and safe cycling, we will continue to have safety hazards. What happened to the upscale vision for West Capitol Avenue? How can they spend so much time expressing concern about architectural enhancements in Southport and then turn down enhancements for downtown? West Sacramento's flat gridded layout is perfect for cycling. We should be doing all we can to encourage this healthy, non-polluting mode of transportation. On the fourth of May, I was very proud that the River City High School band led the "Bike Sacramento" parade for the second consecutive year to celebrate National Bicycle Month. There are residents in West Sacramento to consider besides motel owners. I have used my bike often for commuting to work and running errands around town and would do so more often if it were safer.

Other communities recognize that amenities such as bike lanes draw tourists, residents and the kind of business we would like to have here. I think that the city council wanted to do the right thing, but was misguided by very vocal opposition. This bike lane would not have hurt business. This project was in line with the general plan and upscale image so sought after by local residents. It would not have cost us a dime as it would have been funded by the State Bike Lane Account (90 percent) and the Yolo Solano Air Quality Management District (ten percent). West Sacramento won a grant in a very stiff competition for projects in the Sacramento region and the state. That meant that over $60,000 of our gas tax money would have come back to our community for a worthwhile project. Those funds will have to be forfeited and some other community with more vision will be happy to have them.

I had spoken on this issue before the Planning Commission and I attended the city council meeting expecting to be given the opportunity to express my support. Unfortunately, I and another resident bicycle commuter who wished to speak in support had to leave after 11 p.m. It is my understanding that the council did not reach this item of the agenda until midnight. It is appalling that citizens should be expected to be at the city council meeting in the middle of the night to be able to air their concerns publicly. Most of the residents, and particularly the cyclists, are in bed at that hour. (I am sure that that is where the city councilmembers would rather have been as well). I think that more efficient meetings could be held if the members all read their materials ahead of time and asked staff questions before the meeting to obtain the information they need. The city council should consider ways to streamline their meetings so that they can be open public meetings in a very practical sense.

The lesson I learned from this experience is that we must educate our city council and local businesses on the assets of a bike-friendly community. The loss of these funds is a terrible shame. It will be far more costly to correct the unsafe conditions in the future. For now, West Capitol Avenue will remain dangerous for cyclists and friendly for trucks which will do nothing to enhance our reputation. I was dumbfounded when I learned that they had turned this opportunity down. I hope to provide the city council with the information they will need about cycling to make better decisions in such matters in the future.

More on bike lanes...

On May 10, I attended the West Sacramento City Council meeting where the issue of bike lanes on West Capitol Avenue was discussed. I was the only bicyclist there who spoke in favor of the proposed bike lanes.

The two major arguments against the bike lanes stressed the (1) high speed of vehicles on West Capitol and the (2) detrimental effect upon business -- particularly, the motels -- that would result from the loss of on-street parking.

I pointed out in my comments to the council that speed of traffic is not nearly so crucial to bicycle safety as a car door suddenly opened in the path of a bicyclist, tires caught in sewer grates and avoidance of gutter debris, and pedestrians unseen as they emerge from between parked cars.

The businesses most vocal in opposition claimed that as much as ten percent of their business could be lost -- "could be lost!" Usually such figures are rounded up or exaggerated as much as possible to strengthen one's argument. By their own admission, the motel association's spokesman conceded that none of these motels would lose more than ten percent of their business. Logic tells us that most of these motels would lose considerably less, and perhaps none, of their business. In addition, the business that would be lost is that of truck drivers, predominantly, with their trucks parked on West Capitol Avenue.

Imagine how beautiful our main street would look if it resembled the east side of Tower Bridge where Capitol Mall is free of vehicular parking! With Sound Off!

The "Sound Off!" call-in opinion column has returned. For information on how to participate, please see the details elsewhere on this page. This week's comments:

My comment is about the bridge on Jefferson Blvd. . . . The bridge is not the fault, it's the people driving on the road.

I want to tell the West Sacramento Police Department what a great job they are doing. They are polite, professional and prompt even when answering minor complaints. We are really fortunate to have such excellent police protection.

I want the people in the city to realize a lot of money is being wasted on this Harbor Blvd. project. . . It's a mess, and I think these people are really doing an injustice to the businesses and the people that have to live on Harbor Blvd. . . This road is not that important.

I would like to know why they don't put stop signs up at 17th and Alabama to stop cars going 60 miles per hour plus. A lot of small kids are walking to the ballpark every day.

I'm a little upset because when we first moved into our house, we were told we could not cut down the trees in front of our house because they were, quote, city trees. We had to get a permit for that. But this year we plan on adding an addition to our home. . . (and we will) have to repair the sidewalks and the gutters in front of the house. The city trees have made cracks.

Could someone please tell me why that is?

70 people meet to pick up litter

By Marge Beach, Pastor Community Lutheran Church

Over 70 West Sacramento folks turned out for last Saturday's Community Clean-Up Walk, sponsored by the West Sacramento Ecumenical Ministry Association. The citizens picked up litter west of Jefferson Blvd. on West Capitol Ave. and gathered a truckload of debris at the empty lot next to the Best 4 Less Motel.

Another community service event will be planned in the coming months.

Leaders from area places of worship are invited to attend the next brown bag luncheon meeting of the ecumenical association, Thursday, June 8, at Community Lutheran Church, 920 Drever St.

Yolo County bar needs non-lawyers

From Daniel R. Martinez Martinez & Kaminski Attorneys at Law

As a service to its members, their clients, and to the community at large, the Yolo County Bar Association, in conjunction with the State Bar of California, provides an attorney/client fee dispute arbitration program. This arbitration process helps resolve attorney fee disputes between attorneys and their clients prior to formal litigation.

The California Business and Professions Code and the Yolo County Bar Association Fee Rules provide that in any fee disputes over $1,000.00, the parties are entitled to three arbitrators. At least one of those arbitrators must be a non-attorney.

The Yolo County Bar Association is seeking volunteers to act as non-attorney arbitrators to resolve attorney/client fee disputes. For more information should contact Dan Martinez, at 372-4752, 1524 Merkley Ave., West Sacramento.

all that the city council has done to clean up West Capitol Avenue I do not understand why allowing trucks to continue to park on West Capitol is in the best interest of our community. More than that, at the expense of the safety of children and others who ride their bicycles along our main street!

In addition to personal health and safety of bicyclists, for every person who rides a bicycle instead of driving in a vehicle the air quality improves for all of us. Those of us who either live or work in West Sacramento all benefit!

It is inconsistent with the city's current efforts to propose a community center on West Capitol Avenue and then throw away an opportunity to provide bicycle lanes to the facility. How do city leaders expect children to travel to the community center? And "throw away" is the proper term for it. The money, in excess of $60,000 earmarked for the bicycle lanes is completely funded through outside grants. It would not have cost the city a penny!

How unfortunate and symbolic that the decision to give back the $60,000+ was rendered at about midnight, when the sound of children's voices are completely silent. I reminded the council members that they are representatives for all our citizens, even those who own no businesses and go to school and go to sleep by 9 p.m.

Who will make the call to the family whose child is killed when his bicycle veers into traffic on West Capitol Avenue to avoid the sudden opening of a car door that it was more important to let trucks park on West Capitol Avenue?

Confused by planning dept.

An Open Letter to the City Manager of West Sacramento and Harry Gibson of Build Permits:

I must confess to being totally confused. When I arrived home today I discovered a citation attached to a recently constructed free standing carport. If I am in error I will remove the structure but as I will indicate in the following paragraphs, I do not feel I have broken any laws or in any way circumvented their intent.

When my wife and I procured a second vehicle we decided we needed some way to protect the family car. We studied the situation and decided an attached carport would be the ideal solution. Unfortunately, when we began the research we discovered an attached "anything" would cause a great deal of grief with the city regulating authority. We then decided to try for a detached, free standing structure. We drew plans of our intended carport and presented them for approval when we applied for a building permit. Here is where the trouble begins.

We were told that by reducing the size to less than 120 square feet we could build without a permit. We were absolutely honest when dealing with your people. We described the structure, we provided dimensions for our driveway. We showed them the plans which we intended to build from and your people even took copies. We did some redesigning to comply with the 120 square foot rule. Then with the original plans and the information provided by the people in your office, I went to work constructing the carport. We believe we have complied with the plans and the spirit of all conversations. If our plans were out of the questions why weren't we told so prior to construction. I am not a lawyer, nor am I a contractor but had I known a 20-foot set back was required I could have figured out that a 20-foot set back and a six-foot set back from the house on a 27-foot driveway would never work. On the contrary, the lady we worked with told us all we needed was five feet clearance between the sidewalk and the structure, and six feet from the structure and the house. Those limits, along with the 120 square foot limit, was all I had to work with. I set the carport back five feet, six inches and left ten feet between the carport and the house. This, by far, exceeds any and all restrictions your office levied.

As you can see, I have acted in good faith and in accordance with all the direction I was provided by your office. If in fact the required easement for the property is 20 feet, why was I not apprised of that requirement. Under the circumstances I feel your department (an entity whose purpose is to aid in these matters) led me down the garden path. I further feel your people should accept a much greater portion of the responsibility than I. Please not the structure in question is in the front of my home. No effort was made to hide it. I am not an idiot. I new full well it would be visible for all to see. I sought your assistance, satisfied your office and built a quality carport. I was treated well until someone discovered an error. Since that time I have been treated like a refugee from "America's Most Wanted." I do want you to know how I feel. If your people had been diligent in review of my plans, none of this would have happened. Please advise me how to proceed.

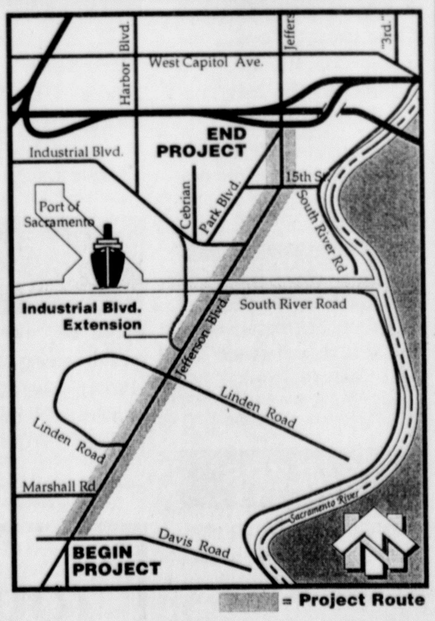
NOTICE OF PUBLIC HEARING AND AVAILABILITY OF ENVIRONMENTAL DOCUMENT

FOR THE JEFFERSON BLVD./STATE ROUTE 84 IMPROVEMENT PROJECT

The City of West Sacramento and the California Department of Transportation (Caltrans) are planning to improve a 3.6-mile section of existing State Route 84 (Jefferson Blvd.) from 1,300 feet south of Marshall Road to State Route 50 within the City of West Sacramento. The project consists of upgrading the existing 2-lane roadway to a multi-lane conventional highway. The highway from Marshall Road to the new Industrial Blvd. extension would be 6 lanes. From Industrial Blvd. to State Route 50 it would be 4 lanes. The existing roadway would be reconstructed to provide shoulders, a bike lane, and a median. Included in the project is the construction of a new 2-lane low-level fixed-span bridge over the Barge Canal, west of and parallel to the existing bascule bridge.



= Project Route

An open forum hearing will be held and all interested members of the community are invited to attend. City staff will be present to talk with individuals, answer questions, and take comments. There will be a brief presentation to familiarize the public with the proposed project. The time and place of the hearing are listed below.

DATE: Thursday, May 25, 1995
TIME: 7:00 - 9:00 p.m.
WHERE: City Council Chambers
2101 Stone Boulevard, 2nd Floor, West Sacramento

The City, in cooperation with Caltrans, has prepared an environmental document for this roadway improvement project. This environmental document is called a Draft Environmental Assessment/Negative Declaration. The finding of this environmental document is that there will be no significant adverse environmental effects from the project because potential adverse effects will be mitigated. The public review period for this environmental document is April 26 to May 26, 1995.

The environmental document, project maps, and other project information are available for review at the City of West Sacramento Community Development Department, 1951 South River Road, West Sacramento, from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday. Other locations where the environmental document is available are the Turner Branch Library at 1212 Merkley Avenue, and City Hall at 2101 Stone Blvd.

If you cannot attend the open forum hearing but have comments concerning the project, please submit them in writing to the address shown below by May 26, 1995. Letters postmarked May 26 will be accepted.
